PREFACE.

IN the spring of 1892 the author began collecting material for a history of the American Hoadleys, and now takes pleasure in presenting to them the result of his labors. The town and church records of Branford and the probate records at Guilford have naturally proved the most fruitful field for investigation, while many important facts have also been discovered in the records at New Haven, Wallingford, Waterbury, and other towns. Outside of Connecticut the author has had to depend largely on correspondence to obtain particulars of those who left their native State.

The difficulties with which a genealogist has to contend are great. The records in different towns, and the town and church records in the same town often disagree, while the registers in family bibles and the inscriptions on grave stones are generally at variance with other sources of information. Then again the most careful correspondents sometimes make mistakes, and accounts of a family by its different members often disagree, so strict accuracy in dates in many cases is unattainable.

The localities which have been the special homes of the Hoadleys and with which their name is most closely identified are the towns of Branford, Waterbury, Naugatuck and Plymouth in Connecticut, Turin and Windsor in New York, Burton and Columbia in Ohio, Canaan in Pennsylvania, Plainfield in Indiana, Fairfield in Michigan, and Tinnmouth in Vermont.

The Hoadleys as a race are endowed with the same vigorous mental and physical character and pride of family which distinguished their ancestors. They may well be proud of the record of their forefathers, for they proved by the part they took in the early Colonial struggles and in the later wars of the Republic that the positions of trust with which they were honored were wisely and deservedly bestowed upon them by their State and Country. They have boldly gone out into the wilderness and faced the hardships incident to all new settlements, and their energy and enterprise have invariably benefited the communities in which they have made their homes; and in all civil, educational, and religious movements they have been found progressive and ready to do their part in laying the foundation of American society.

Canner - $10.00

The author thanks the many friends who have contributed to these pages, and hopes that they will derive as much pleasure from the Genealogy as he has done from their correspondence.

THE Hoadley family originated in the south of England and is supposed to have derived its name from one of two parishes in Sussex, East and West Hoadly, (now spelled Hoathly), one in the rape of Lewes, the other in that of Pevensey.

Mention is made in the Sussex Archeological Collections of Margaret, daughter and heir of Solomon de Hothlegh, (about 1280,) of William de Hodlegh, 1296, of Maurice de Hodleye, 1318, (11th Ed. ii.) King Edward ii sent Maurice de Hothlegh on an errand from Tunbridge to London.

In Queen Elizabeth's time John Hodeley, of Lamberhurst on the borders of Kent and Sussex, had a chancery suit against the vicar.

Thomas Hodely, of Sussex, pleb., of Queens College Oxford, matriculated 7 Dec. 1616, aged 18, B.A. 1629, M.A. 1623.

In the 17th century there were a number by the name in various parishes of Sussex and Kent, who were small landholders, and the name is still to be found in those counties.

The place of birth neither of John Hoadley of Guilford, nor of William of Branford, has as yet been ascertained, though there appears to be reason to suppose that the former came from Kent. That they were related is probable, but the fact rests only at present on family tradition.

WILLIAM HOADLEY

WILLIAM HOADLEY, or Hoadle, as he spelt the name, the ancestor of by far the greater part of those who bear the name in this country, was born in England about 1630.* He first appears in Saybrook in 1663. In 1666 he bought the homelot of Rev. Abraham Pierson of Branford, when the latter removed to New Jersey. This lot was on the west side of the public green where the Totoket House now stands, and there he conducted his business as a merchant, his shop being next to his dwelling house.

William Hoadley's name appears on the new Plantation Covenant of Branford January 20, 1667-8. He was propounded as a freeman of the Colony at the May session of the General Assembly (May 13,) 1669, and was admitted in the following October. He was one of the representatives or deputies for Branford at nine sessions of the Assembly between 1678 and 1685, and one of the patentees of the town February 16, 1685-6. He was one of the selectmen several years between 1673 and 1690. At a town meeting held June 26, 1683, he was chosen and appointed to keep the ordinary in Branford. The death of his wife, perhaps, occasioned him to lay it down, and his successor was chosen to keep it March 28, 1687. In the time of Sir Edmund Andros William Hoadley was one of the grand-jurors at a court of quarter-sessions held at New Haven in June, 1688. He was one of a committee appointed October 11, 1686, to make application to the general court at Hartford for liberty for the town to embody into a church estate. In 1699 he was one of a committee to build a meeting house, and was often on committees to procure a minister for the town. The town gave liberty in December, 1701, to Mr. William Hoadley, senior, to build a pew in the meeting house for himself and family and two of his sons and their wives; he building it upon his own charge, and after his decease and his wife's the pew to be at the town's dispose, they paying reasonable charges according to the value of it.

The name and time of death of the first wife of William Hoadley are unknown. He had eight children according to the list taken January 17, 1676, but the names of but seven are known and six survived him. He died in November or December, 1709, aged about 79 years. The date of his inventory is December 27th, and its amount £1,116. He left a will, but it was rejected by the probate court, and the settlement of his estate was the occasion of a fierce and long continued litigation among his heirs. This will has never been found and its provisions are unknown.

plexion, which he inherited from his mother, he was known around Waterbury as "Black Will" Hoadley. He probably removed there at the time he and May Way of Waterbury bought of James Baldwin on June 1, 1751, nearly all the latter's land, including a grist mill and half a saw mill together with all the buildings, fruit trees, etc. On July 6th of the same year Way sold his half interest in the 200 acres and mills to Richard Smith of Woodbury who conveyed the same to Jonathan Beebe. In October, 1753, Beebe and Hoadley divided the land, the former retaining an interest in the house and mill place. They operated the grist and saw mills together till May, 1754, when Beebe sold his interest to Hoadley, including his half interest in the house. William Hoadley probably lived in the Daniel Warner house, the first one built in that section, until 1763, when he sold it with one acre of land to his son Lemuel. He appears to have built a house for himself on the north side of the brook and west of the grist mill. His will dated August 14, 1779, was proved at Waterbury April 5, 1784. In it he mentions his wife Sarah and all his children but David.

William Hoadley came with his father to Naugatuck, and after the latter's death, occupied the mills till April, 1810, when he sold his house, grist mill, and land to Ebenezer Scott, soon after removing with his son William to Ohio. One year's residence in New Connecticut satisfied them, however, and they returned to Naugatuck. His wife was a very handsome woman and a village belle, and belonged to a wealthy family.

18. LEMUEL HOADLEY (William<sup>a</sup>, William<sup>2</sup>, William<sup>1</sup>), baptized 27 February 1737 in Branford, Conn.; died 1 August 1816 in Brecksville, Ohio; married 5 January 1767 in Naugatuck, Conn., URANIA MALLORY, daughter of Peter and Mary Mallory, born 1749 in North Stratford, Conn.; died in March 1799 in Winsted, Conn.

Lemuel Hoadley was brought to Naugatuck by his father. In 1772 he sold his house and an acre of land to Ezra Bronson, so that probably his two eldest children were born in what is now Naugatuck. He lived in what is now called Platt's Mills in Waterbury, where he had a grist mill. The mill and land were sold to Joseph Hopkins when he and his sons removed to Columbia, Lorain County, Ohio.

The following is from address delivered at Columbia in 1859 by Rev. S. A. Bronson, D. D., before the Lorain County Historical Society. "Early in the month of September, 1807, at Waterbury, Conn., thirty persons began preparations to remove to the far West. They were Calvin Hoadley, wife and five children; Lemuel Hoadley, wife and three children; his father and his wife's mother, * * * * and others. In November the company arrived at Buffalo and a small party started up the lake in a small craft of forty or fifty tons burden. They were buffeted about by storms for a whole month, landing three times for shelter, the last time at Erie * * * * . After hardships on land and lake, a small party at length reached the Cuyahoga river. The river was then the western boundary of civilization so far as the lake region was concerned, and the Forest City contained but three log cabins. The party were bound for Columbia, and among them, it is said, were the first team and first white woman, except Canadian-French, that had ever crossed the Cuyahoga. It took eight days cutting a road through the forest for the little party to reach Columbia Township from the Cuyahoga river, and they arrived late in December. The nearest dwelling was twenty miles away, the nearest post office at Painesville fifty miles distant, and the nearest grist mill at Newburg twenty-eight miles distant."

Lemuel Hoadley was a blacksmith by trade and is said to have set up the first blacksmith shop in Columbia in 1808. He also built the first fanning mill there. He died in Brecksville, Cuyahoga County, whither he had gone with his son Lemuel in 1812.

Ebenezer Hoadley received twelve and a half acres of land from his father in 1763, situated on the hill south of the Hopkins road in Naugatuck. He sold this in 1768 to Sarah, wife of Rev. Mark Leavenworth of Waterbury. After his marriage he settled on top of Streight Mountain, so-called, near the Derby line and on the west side of the highway. His house was probably the first one erected on that part of Streight Mountain.

Jude Hoadley lived in Naugatuck in the old Daniel Warner house which he sold in 1775. In the year 1773 he bought of Zera Beecher a parcel of land with a house on it, but it is not known whether he erected a new house thereon. The house where he lived was afterward conveyed to Robert Isbell. It is said that Jude Hoadley had a shop near Falling Mill brook, where he made nearly all the spinning wheels and winding reels that were so common in olden times. If this is true, he did good work, for the old wheels now preserved stowed away in many garrets testify to the good quality of his workmanship.

Jude Hoadley was a private in the 5th Company, Capt. Jabez Thompson, Second Regiment in 1761. He enlisted April 14th and was discharged December 12th. He was a soldier of the Revolution, having been a sergeant in Captain Jesse Curtis's company in Col. Hooker's regiment, which was stationed at Peekskill Barracks April 7, 1777.

Y.; married 26 April 1759 in Branford, MARY BARKER, daughter of Daniel and Patience Barker, born 23 December 1739 in Branford; died soon after her husband in Windsor.

Daniel Hoadley inherited his father's farm in North Branford, where his wife was one of the first members of the Congregational church. He was one of a military company raised by the pastor of that church at the outbreak of the Revolution. In 1795, in company with his brother-in-law John Barker, he removed with his family to that part of New York State then known as the "Susquehanna Country," Broome County, and settled in what is now Windsor, where many of his descendants still reside. He looked down the river where the city of Binghamton now stands, and could have got land there as cheaply as where he finally bought it, but it was timbered with scrub oaks and pitch pines and thought to be no good, so he went back on the hills of Windsor, about two miles from any settlement, and bought 300 acres of the Floyd tract in Randolph, three miles from Windsor, for which he paid £120, since known as Hoadley Hill. His three youngest sons settled on this tract, while his sons Noah and Ira settled on another tract about a mile and a half away. This branch of the family have always been law-abiding citizens, and respected for their honesty and industry. The will of Daniel Hoadley is dated June 15, 1803, and was proved August 13, 1806.

31. CAPT. TIMOTHY HOADLEY (Timothy<sup>1</sup>, Samuel<sup>2</sup>, William<sup>3</sup>), born 2 October 1739 in Branford (Northford), Conn.; died 22 [by ch. rec., 23 by gr. st.] November 1816 in Northford; married 28 January 1781 in Northford, Mrs. REBECCA (LINLEY) TAINTOR, widow of Jared Taintor of Northford, and daughter of Joseph and Lydia (Wilford) Linley, born 4 September 1747 in Northford; died 18 [by fam. rec., 25 by ch. rec.] April 1819 in Northford.

Timothy Hoadley, known as "Captain" and "Squire" Hoadley, was a man of distinction in his native town. While still a youth he was a clerk in the office of Capt. John Blackstone, who was a prominent citizen of Branford and one of the largest ship owners in New Haven County.

Timothy Hoadley was captain of a company of Northford militia in the Second Regiment during the Revolution, and is said to have been in the campaign which resulted in Burgoyne's surrender to Gates.

Captain Hoadley represented Branford in thirty-five sessions of the General Assembly between the years 1780 and 1810, and was a member of the Connecticut Convention called to ratify the Constitution of the United States. His vote is recorded in the negative. He explained that he so voted, because he regarded the Constitution as calculated to create an aristocratic form of government. He looked upon judges appointed for life, senators appointed for six years, and presidents for four years, with a distrust not unnatural to a Connecticut gentleman elected at intervals of six months to a legislature which chose the judges every year; and in which State the governor was also chosen annually, although the case of Governor Trumbull proved that annual elections amounted almost to life tenure when public confidence justified it.

Squire Hoadley was a man of a very high order of intelligence and for a long time filled the office of a magistrate. He was a wealthy farmer for those times, and a land surveyor as well, being a good deal of a mathematician, and a beautiful penman. He was very slender, and six feet, four inches tall. He was a grave and rather silent man, not a professed Christian, but maintained family worship, as many non-communicants of the Protestant Church did in those times.

William Hoadley was a millwright by trade and lived in Naugatuck. In early life he went with his family to Ohio, making the trip in an ox-cart when he could not go by canal. They did not like Ohio, however, and returned to Naugatuck. He then bought the house, which was then being built, where he lived the rest of his life and which is now owned by his grandson John. It stands about half a mile south of the depot on the left hand side of the railroad as you go up the valley and is a good example of the New England farm house.

43. CAPT. CALVIN HOADLEY (Lemuel<sup>8</sup>, William<sup>5</sup>, William<sup>3</sup>, William<sup>1</sup>), born 2 July 1769 in Waterbury, Conn.; died 21 July 1846 in Columbia, Ohio; married in 1791 in Naugatuck, MIRIAM TERRELL, sister of Noah Terrell, born 8 August 1770 in Waterbury; died 12 May 1841 in Columbia.

Calvin Hoadley lived in Plymouth Hollow, then part of Waterbury, until he emigrated to Ohio. He, his brother Lemuel, with their families, and their father were in the party which set out for Columbia, Ohio, in September, 1807.* It took two months to reach Buffalo, west of which place there was then no road, and the party were compelled to choose between the dangers, at that time of the year, of lake navigation and those attending a journey along the shore. The company divided, the Hoadley party embarking in a vessel called the "Walk-on-the-water" set sail on the lake. After a perilous voyage they had come within sight of Cleveland, then a place of three log houses, when their craft was struck by a violent wind, and they finally went on shore near the site of the present city of Erie. Capt. Hoadley determined to make another trial, and with his family arrived at Cleveland after encountering experiences similar to those described. In the following March Capt. Hoadley commenced life in the Columbia woods in a house previously built on lot 34. In the summer of 1809 he built a grist mill on Rocky river, south of the Center, the first mill in the county. His millstones were the first hung west of the Cuyahoga and are still in use. He also built a grist mill and a saw mill on the same river on lot 21. Hoadley's Mills in those days were a center of much importance and were known far and wide. The mills are on the western branch of Rocky river and were the first ones built west of the Cuyahoga river. After the railroad was built Eri Hickox, his son-in-law, named the place West View.

Calvin Hoadley was a man of great energy of character and soon became one of the most prominent men of the town. On October 25, 1810, he was commissioned by Gov. Samuel Huntington captain of a militia company which had been formed in the town, and of which his brother Lemuel was chosen lieutenant. After Hull's surrender, on being ordered by Gen. Wadsworth to proceed with his company to the defense of Cleveland, Capt. Hoadley refused, as it would leave the people of Columbia without protection. He was not, however, court-martialed for disobedience of orders, but directed to establish frontier military head-quarters at Columbia; and after the erection of the block house in 1812 he held the command.

Capt. Calvin Hoadley was a fine looking man, of a tall and commanding figure and military bearing. He was a master spirit of the county, and his name is even now seen in the press of the present day. Captain Hoadley was a very religious man and was interested in the erection of three churches in Columbia. He built the first church erected in the Western Reserve, which is still standing in East Cleveland, and was celebrated in Lorain County for the excellence of the buildings he erected.

Capt. Calvin Hoadley's homestead, built nearly eighty years ago, is now owned by the Baker family, descendants of his eldest daughter, and the author is indebted to Miss Bethia W. Baker of West View for the accompanying picture of the old house and much information concerning her great grandfather Captain Hoadley. The house stands on the east bank of Rocky River, West View, Ohio. The interior is in a much better state of preservation than the exterior. It is a large house having many large rooms and spacious halls with high ceilings. Fine views of the surrounding country are to be had from its windows. The river runs to the north for half a mile then turns to the east. The mill Captain Hoadley built is about half this distance away and the iron bridge a few feet from the mill on the county line. In front of the house the river bank is almost perpendicular and sixty feet from the top to the water's brink. To the south, from where this photograph was taken, the river bends to the west, giving a view for a distance of three-quarters of a mile. Six generations have lived in the old house, and many family gatherings have been held under its roof. Eri Hickox and his wife were very hospitable people, and there are people in nearly every State in the Union who have at some time enjoyed that hospitality.

44. DAVID HOADLEY (Lemuel<sup>s</sup>, William<sup>e</sup>, William<sup>2</sup>, William<sup>1</sup>), born 29 April 1774 in Waterbury, Conn.; died in July 1839 in Waterbury; married, 1st, about 1798, in Waterbury, JANE HULL, daughter of Ezra and Annis (Johnson) Hull, born 8 February 1774 in Waterbury; died in 1799 in Waterbury. He married, 2d, about 1805, RACHEL BEECHER, daughter of Jonathan Beecher, who died 12 April 1857 in Hartford, Conn., aged 77 years.

David Hoadley early learned the trade of a house carpenter and soon became distinguished as a builder. He was employed upon the Congregational meeting house in Waterbury in 1795 and also erected the dwelling of the late Judge Kingsbury. He afterwards constructed a Congregational church in Milford, Conn. The reputation he thus obtained was the occasion of his being invited to superintend the construction of the North Congregational Church in New Haven, Conn., to which place he removed with his family in 1814. There he erected several fine residences which are still standing. He also built the Tontine, so called, and a large mansion house in Middletown, Conn., owned by Sammel Russell, Esq. As a self-taught architect Mr. Hoadley had few superiors. He broke down, however, while still in the vigor of manhood, and returned to Waterbury late in life to spend the remainder of his days. He had a sound judgment, a well balanced mind, and a generous, honest heart.

45. COL. SAMUEL HOADLEY (Lemuel<sup>s</sup>, William<sup>e</sup>, William<sup>2</sup>, William<sup>1</sup>), born 25 November 1776 in Waterbury, Conn.; died

21 September 1843 in Columbia, Ohio; married about 1800, CONTENT BARNES, daughter of Titus Barnes, born 25 May 1780 in Wolcottville,* Conn.; died 30 September 1858 in Columbia.

Samuel Hoadley and his brother Luther came to the village of Winsted in the town of Winchester, Conn., in 1803, the former being admitted in 1804 and the latter in 1805. They became owners of a dam and water privileges with the land adjoining on both sides of Still river, formerly occupied by the Doolittle corn mill. They built a saw mill on the site of the old corn mill and soon after erected a new grist mill on the east side of the stream. They also built for the town a wooden bridge across the chasm where the stone arched-bridge has been placed within a few years. About 1807 they and their brother-in-law Riley Whiting began the manufacture of wooden clocks in a small factory adjoining the east wing of the bridge on the south side of the road in which they did a large and profitable business. They also began casting clock bells about 1810, by a secret process, in a detached building from which outsiders were rigidly excluded. In 1812 they and James Boyd erected a wire factory on the west wing of the clock factory dam, the first, or one of the first, erected in the country for breaking down iron wire from the rod and drawing it down to any size from a half inch to a hair's diameter. At that period there were few, if any, rolling mills in the country that rolled out round rods suitable for wire drawing. Samuel and Luther Hoadley were for ten years prominent and highly esteemed business men in Winsted, and by their ingenuity and enterprise contributed largely to the growth and prosperity of the village.

Samuel Hoadley built and resided in the two-story house west of and nearly opposite the stone bridge. He retired from business on his appointment as Major of the Thirty-seventh Regiment Infantry in the war of 1812. He was appointed by President Madison March 11, 1813, during the recess of the Senate, and nominated to the Senate June 18th following, that body confirming him July 7, 1813. He was promoted Lieutenant-Colonel of the Thirty-first Infantry, October 31, 1814, and disbanded June 15, 1815. He was in service mainly at New London, Conn.

Colonel Hoadley continued his residence in Winsted until his removal to Columbia, Ohio, about 1825. In Columbia he lived near his brothers and was a leading citizen of the town. Here he resided until his death.

46. Lemuel Hoadley was one of the Waterbury party who emigrated to Ohio in 1807. In this party were also his brother Calvin and his family and their father. They went first to Buffalo, N. Y., and then set sail on Lake Erie. After a twenty-one day passage, tossing about on the lake, they finally reached Cleveland, their place of destination.*

Lemuel Hoadley reached Columbia† early in the spring of 1808. He was a mechanic, and much of his life was engaged in the erection of mills, building most of the mills in that section of the country. He removed to Brecksville in 1812, where he built the first mill in the Center the following year, a log grist mill containing the first machinery operated by water power in the township. Here he was one of the organizers of the Congregational church. In 1814 he removed to Bath and erected mills there. In 1819 he settled in Olmsted, Cuyahoga County, and erected for himself the pioneer mill in that township; and also built the first frame house, which is still standing. In 1824 he exchanged his farm and a mill in Olmsted for a farm in Ridgeville, Lorain County, west of the center of the town, and took up his abode there. In 1832 he sold out and moved back to Olmsted, and with his son-in-law John Barnum built a saw mill at the mouth of Plum Creek, and laid out a village there.

Mr. Hoadley was early engaged in military affairs and was a lieutenant in his brother Capt. Calvin Hoadley's company. He afterwards received the appointment of major. In the spring of 1839 he and his son Luther and his son-in-law John Adams went with their families to Chillicothe, Ohio, where during the summer Major Hoadley died; and such was the climatic condition of the country, nearly all having suffered to some extent from malarial fevers, that they were induced to return in the following fall to the north.

"In 1819 Major Hoadley of Olmsted, finding that his dilapidated log cabin had become uncomfortable, resolved to build a frame house. He had proceeded so far as to cut, hew, and frame the timber, when he was unexpectedly called from home on important business. The winter was approaching; and his two daughters, Maria and Eunice, who were robust and resolute girls, and perhaps desirous of creating favorable impressions proceeded with the erection of the new house. They put the timber, piece by piece, into place, raised the building, and had nearly finished it, when their father returned, expressed his astonishment and pronounced the work well done. With the aid of his daughters the house was soon completed; and at Christmas the girls gave what is called a house-warming, a frolic and dance to which the lads and lasses of the neighborhood were invited, and which was soon followed by the wedding and happy settlement in life of the two fair architects. This achievement shows what Ohio girls could do in the early times."—[From "Pioneers of the Western Reserve," pp. 98-9.]

He lived the first summer on potatoes and milk, and lived alone. The next summer he got a neighbor's wife to bake for him. His orchard was all grown from seeds he brought from Connecticut. Some of the trees are still alive. When he built his new house he furnished the second story in one room to be used as a church, and took the young minister into his own family and almost entirely supported him. From his humble beginning Mr. Hoadley became a wealthy man for those days.

Mr. Hoadley's word was considered as good as a note at any time, and he was held in great esteem by his fellow townsmen. He was prominent both in church and all affairs relating to the town and country round about. All his life his home was open to the visiting ministers, and in all cases of need his purse and his goods were freely drawn upon. In his death the county mourned a good man gone to his rest.

Jared Hoadley was brought by his father to Windsor, N. Y. He settled on his father's 300 acre tract. He was a prosperous farmer and lumberman, and owned a home farm of 200 acres and sometimes rented two or three others. In 1851 he retired from active life and bought a fine residence in Windsor Village. At this time he presented each of his sons with a well stocked farm.

He and his wife were both members of the Methodist church. They were almost the same age, died within a few days of each other, and were buried in one grave.

SCARBOROUGH, widow of Jared Scarborough (Y. C. 1803) of Hartford, Conn., and daughter of William Walton and Elizabeth (Dwight) Woolsey, born 3 May 1793 in New York City; died 28 April 1871 in Cincinnati, Ohio.

George Hoadly was graduated with distinction at Yale College in 1801, studied law with Hon. Charles Chauncy, LL.D., and was tutor at Yale from 1803 to 1806. From 1806 to 1808 he was Washington correspondent of the United States Gazette, and one of the first of that class of Congressional correspondents since become so numerous and influential. During the time spent in the discharge of his duties at the Federal Capitol, at that and various other dates, he was intimately associated with those public men who gave shape and tone to the national measures under which our Republic has so vigorously prospered. The unwritten, and therefore honest, history of those days as it fell from his lips was intensely interesting and instructive.

Mr. Hoadly was mayor of New Haven from 1822 to 1826. In 1830 he removed to Cleveland, Ohio, where he soon had thrust upon him the, then, very important trust of magistrate, which, by five elections of the people, he held from 1832 to 1847, during which time he decided over twenty thousand suits. He was also mayor of Cleveland in 1846 and 1847.

Withdrawing from active business life, Mr. Hoadly quietly lived in the enjoyment of ample resources for indulgence in books, and an exquisite taste as a horticulturist, arborist, and botanist; every tree, shrub, and plant was a volume, and one by him most thoroughly read; nature could hardly unfold an unfamiliar leaf. His acquaintance with New England family history was extensive, his recollection of the men and events of the past sixty years was vivid, and his fund of general information inexhaustible. He was hale and vigorous up to a few days before his death, which was the result of an attack of plenrisy brought on by exposure to the cold.

Mrs. Hoadly was a granddaughter of Jonathan Edwards, President of Princeton; niece of Timothy Dwight, President of Yale; and the eldest daughter in a family which included among its members her youngest brother, President Theodore D. Woolsey of Yale, her nephew, Theodore Winthrop, and her niece, Miss Sarah Woolsey, known in literature as Miss Susan Coolidge.

Simeon Hoadley when fourteen years of age left his father's home and went to sea, as was customary with so many boys of that day. He made his first voyage from Guilford, Conn., to the West Indies, Guilford at that being largely engaged in the West India trade. He rose rapidly in his profession, and at the age of twenty-one commanded a vessel. He continued a most skilful and successful shipmaster and owner of vessels, and was for many years engaged in the Southern trade. He made several voyages to Russia, bringing back one of the first cargoes of hemp ever received in the United States. He also sailed to other parts of Europe, including Mediterranean ports, as well as South America and the West Indies. At the age of forty-five, having been continuously at sea for thirty-one years, he relinquished active life and made his permanent home in New Haven.

Captain Hoadley possessed that strict integrity which marked his ancestors, and was an upright, conscientious, unostentatious, and strictly honest man. His erect and stalwart form, as daily seen in the streets, is well remembered by many of his fellow citizens.

* Grandparents of the Author, Francis Bacon Trowbridge. He is the son of Thomas Rutherford and Katherine (Bacon) Trowbridge of New Haven, and was born in that city 7 June 1866. He was graduated at Yale College in 1887 and at the Yale Law School in 1890. In 1891 he published the "Champion Genealogy," 8vo., pp. xvi, 560, and is the author of the present volume.

Loammi Ives Hoadley was graduated at Yale College in 1817, and at once entered the Theological Seminary in Andover, Mass., where he took the regular three years' course, remaining for a fourth year as resident licentiate on a scholarship foundation. In 1822 he began to preach to the Calvinist (now Central) Church in Worcester, Mass., then newly organized, and on the 15th of October, 1823, he was ordained their pastor. The loss of health, from disease of the lungs, caused his dismissal, December 9, 1829, and he spent the next few months in Andover, as assistant in the department of Sacred Rhetoric. He was again settled in the Ministry October 15, 1830, over the First Congregational Church in Bradford, Mass., but his health not allowing him to remain, he withdrew from this charge late in 1832 and removed to Charlestown, Mass., where he resided until the spring of 1844, engaged in literary work. He edited the last volume of "The Spirit of the Pilgrims," and assisted Dr. Jenks in preparing the "Comprehensive Commentary." He next removed to his native place, where he kept a family school. Finding that he could bear public speaking again, he undertook in September, 1850, the supply of the Congregational church in Orono, Me., where he continued for the next three years; he was then similarly employed in Auburn, Mass., from February, 1854, to January, 1857. In August, 1858, he went to Craftsbury, Vt., where he acted as pastor of the Congregational church for over seven years. Having then reached the age of 75, he retired from active labor and spent the evening of life partly in New Haven, Conn., (1867-74) and partly with his married daughters. His death was due to old age. His obituary was printed in "Yale Obituaries," third series, p. 115.

Mr. Hoadley was tall, very erect and active in his movements, with the clean-shaven face and white cravat which marked the ministry of his day, but with a manner so easy and cordial as to attract all classes. He was a very faithful pastor, keeping a careful oversight of the flock, and was especially skilful in wayside ministries. A thorough and critical scholar, he was as a preacher able and impressive, and his sermons, carefully elaborated, were full of sound doctrine.

Abram Hoadley left his father's house at the age of sixteen, and with such articles as found ready sale began business on his own account. He started on foot, but as soon as the profits from his sales would justify his doing so, he bought a horse and wagon and later a two-horse wagon. He continued in this business for ten years, at the end of which time he married, read medicine, and began the practice of his profession in Chatham County, N. C. His house was situated at a cross-roads. In the year 1837 he moved to Hendricks County, Indiana, and settled on a good farm near Plainfield. He soon established himself in a large practice, with which he was occupied until he began to withdraw from active practice a few years before the close of his life. Meantime his farming and stockraising interests had not been neglected, but were brought up to a high degree of excellence. Doctor Hoadley was a man of influence in the neighborhood, and his professional services were frequently sought in his own and surrounding counties.

89. ORRIN HOADLEY (Jonathan,<sup>38</sup> Jonathan<sup>16</sup>, Abraham<sup>6</sup>, William<sup>1</sup>), born 11 June 1788 in Branford, Conn. ; died 29 May (by fam. rec., 31 Jan. by Epis. ch. rec.) 1864 in Branford ; married, 1st, 15 November 1818 in Tinmouth, Vt., HANNAH HOADLEY FRISBIE, daughter of William and Rebecca (Hoadley (12. iii)) Frisbie, born 17 August 1788 in Branford ; died 24 September 1825 in Branford. He married, 2d, in 1826 in Branford, JULIA MATILDA TYLER, daughter of Jacob and Huldah (Stannard) Tyler, born 13 March 1808 in North Branford ; died 26 August 1848 in Branford. He married, 3d, in Cleveland, Ohio, SARAH WETHERHOLT, daughter of Elisha and Fanny (Dougherty) Wetherholt, born 7 October 1831 in Columbus, Ohio. She was married, second, 12 June 1865, to Eli Sheesley of Terra Haute, Ind., who died there 23 January 1893 ; and she died there 28 March 1893.

Orrin Hoadley, estimated by comparison with his contemporaries and measured by the geographical limitations of his native town, came to the front rank as first citizen and townsman of Branford. Everyone no matter of what state or condition could rely with just and reasonable confidence on his advice and skilful direction.

Mr. Hoadley's leading characteristic as a public man was the desire to lighten the burdens of the heavy laden and to shelter the defenseless, and at the same time being an advocate of equal and exact justice, with broad and liberal views on all subjects that were brought to his attention. In the legislative halls of the State he was classed as a democrat, but his anxious solicitude, and his first inquiry as a law maker, was whether a proposed legislative enactment was just to all interests and operated alike and equally upon all citizens.

In industrial pursuits Mr. Hoadley was a successful agriculturist, and for many years baled large quantities of hay for the West India trade. He was also engaged in blacksmithing. He was a representative from Branford to the General Assembly in 1840, and held various responsible municipal offices, being very popular as a selectman. He was a leading member of Trinity Episcopal Church in Branford, its junior warden 1849-54, 1856-7, and 1864, and its senior warden in 1855 and from 1858 to 1863.

Mr. Hoadley was tall and commanding in appearance, and a man in whom gentleness and strength were intimately blended. One daughter, Mrs. Johnson of New Haven, who has contributed much information for this volume, and his youngest son survive him, with eighteen grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

died 28 December 1870 in Plymouth, Conn.; married 21 September 1807 in Plymouth, SARAH PAINTER, daughter of Thomas and Lucina Painter, born 22 October 1789 in Plymouth; died 1 March 1864 in Plymouth.

Silas Hoadley spent his boyhood in his native place. His school advantages were very limited, for at an early age he was apprenticed to Calvin Hoadley (43) to learn the carpenter's and joiner's trade which he followed till 1809. He then associated himself with Eli Terry and Seth Thomas for the manufacture of wood clocks at a small settlement then called Ireland, afterwards named Hoadleyville, in the southeastern part of the town of Plymouth, Conn., and four miles from Waterbury. Since the property has left the Hoadley family the name has been changed to Greystone. In 1810 Mr. Terry sold out to Hoadley and Thomas who carried on the business till 1814, when Mr. Thomas sold his interest to Mr. Hoadley and set up the manufacture of wood clocks in Plymouth Hollow, now Thomaston. Mr. Hoadley continued the business till about 1849, when he rented the shops for making knives and shears till his death in 1870. By his own efforts he had amassed a good property by which his family and the public were helped. In a mild way Mr. Hoadley held to his opinion with tenacity, but had the highest respect for other people's and was genial and courteous to everyone. He took an active interest in the affairs of State, town and church. In politics he was a democrat of the Jackson stripe, and was repeatedly honored with public marks of esteem by his townsmen, being elected to the General Assembly in the years 1832, 1837, and 1853, and to the State Senate in 1844, positions which he most faithfully and honorably discharged to the satisfaction of his constituents and friends. In the legislative halls of his State his happy way of illustrating his ideas always commanded respect and attention. In religion Mr. Hoadley was an Episcopalian, and a regular attendant at the services of St. Peter's Church in Plymouth Centre, of which he was a vestryman and which was benefited by his counsel and contributions and generously remembered in his will. At the convention of the diocese he was frequently a delegate, took an active part and was listened to with interest.

Mr. Hoadley was a Free Mason of high standing and one of most respected and oldest members of Harmony Lodge, No. 42, F. and A. M., of Plymouth, having been intimately associated with the order for more than half a century, uniting with the old Federal Lodge of Watertown in 1817. His lodge bears testimony that, "His heart was always in the right place, with a hand as open as the day to meeting charity. Of him it may truly be said, 'an honest man is the noblest work of God.'"

At the outbreak of the Civil War he enlisted in the Union Army and was drum-major of the 52d Regiment Illinois Volunteers. His time expired just as the battle of Shiloh began on April 6, 1862—the 52d being stationed there. Mr. Hoadley got his discharge, but as the opening guns of Shiloh sounded in his ears he concluded to go out near the front and witness the battle. His rashness cost him his life. He was struck by a cannon ball and found dead with his discharge in his pocket.

Erastus William Hoadley, sometimes called "Skipper" to distinguish him from his cousin William Hoadley (41), is remembered in Waterbury as a man possessing wonderful ingenuity. In difficult mechanical problems he was never at fault, and no matter what it was he was equal to it. He was the first person that bent a board by sawing it crosswise of the grain on one side, an idea of his when working as a boy in a churn factory. The old people of Naugatuck relate hundreds of incidents where his inventive genius was brought into prominence. In respect to a certain hook and eye machine invention it would seem that he did not receive full credit for his share of the work.

He was a very useful man in repairing or improving the machinery used in his time, and the gilt button burnishers employed at the Benedict shops in Waterbury would always wait for him to repair their lathes, believing that he could do it better than any one else. It is said that he made a valuable improvement for making button eyes, and that on one occasion he appeared on the street holding in his arms a button eye machine and a coil of wire, vigorously working the machine while a stream of button eyes poured out and fell to the ground.

Mr. Hoadley died a comparatively young man, at a time when the new era of invention was about to begin, for soon after his death there was a wonderful revolution in constructing new machinery. Had he lived, he probably would have been foremost in the planning of the new machinery made about that time. It is said that he often declared that he could send signals over a copper wire, but was laughed at, no one believing at that time that the telegraph would ever be used. His wife was a niece of Milo Lewis the "father of manufacturing" in Naugatuck.

Deacon Hoadley's sixtieth birthday was the occasion of a number of his friends presenting him with a chair, accompanied by some verses beginning:

“ Dear friend and Christian brother,	“ Full sixty years are numbered
In socials oft we've met,	Upon the scroll of time,
But this above all others	That you have daily labored
We never can forget.	For the good of all mankind

“ We've found you ever faithful	“ Oh! may thy days be lengthened
In all that's good and true,	Beyond the lot of man,
A token of our friendship	And in the bright hereafter
We now would give to you.	We'll hope to meet again.”

148. HON. GEORGE HOADLY (George<sup>70</sup>, Timothy<sup>31</sup>, Timothy<sup>11</sup>, Samuel<sup>3</sup>, William<sup>1</sup>), born 31 July 1826 in New Haven, Conn.; resides in New York City; married 13 August 1851 in Cincinnati, Ohio, MARY BURNET PERRY, daughter of Samuel and Mary Burnet (Thew) Perry, born 1 March 1827 in Cincinnati.

George Hoadly, Democratic Governor (1884-1886) of the Republican State of Ohio, three times honored with the Doctorate of Laws, by his Alma Mater in 1880, by Yale in 1884, and by Dartmouth in 1887; in his youth junior partner of Chief Justice Salmon P. Chase, the success of Judge Hoadly at the Bar of the State of New York since coming to New York City in 1887, is readily understood.

George Hoadly was graduated in 1844 with the degree of B.A. at the Western Reserve (now Adelbert) College, and was afterwards given the degrees of M.A. and LL.D. by his Alma Mater. After passing a year at the Harvard Law School, where he studied under Judge Story and Prof. Simon Greenleaf, he read law one more year in Zanesville, Ohio, with the Hon. C. C. Convers, and another in Cincinnati, and was admitted to the Bar in 1847. Mr. Hoadly attracted the attention of the Hon. Salmon P. Chase, and after serving two years as a clerk in the firm of Chase and Ball, was admitted as a partner, and the firm became Chase, Ball and Hoadly.

From 1851 to 1853, and again in 1859 to 1866, Judge Hoadly served on the bench of the Superior Court of Cincinnati. Both in the years 1856 and 1862 he declined appointments to the Supreme Bench of Ohio. Resigning from the Superior Court in 1866, the firm of Hoadly, Jackson and Johnson was established.

In 1873 he was chosen, without opposition, a delegate from his county to the convention to frame a new Constitution for Ohio. In the memorable legal contest that ensued before the electoral tribunal on the question of the election to the Presidency of the United States of either Messrs. Hayes or Tilden, Judge Hoadly argued the Oregon and Florida cases. In 1883 he was elected the thirty-third Governor of the State of Ohio, defeating his competitor, Judge Foraker, by 12,529 majority. So large a vote was polled for him that the Democracy carried all the close counties, and elected a legislature which in turn chose the Hon. H. B. Payne as United States Senator. But in 1885 he was in turn defeated by Governor Foraker.

Governor Hoadly has written many pamphlets and delivered many addresses; among the more recent of the latter are those delivered in 1887 at the Centenary of the Dartmouth Phi Beta Kappa, and the annual address in 1888 delivered before the American Bar Association. He has held many political offices; and was President pro tem of the Democratic National Convention in 1880. Governor Hoadly in June, 1885, was president of the board of visitors of the Military Academy at West Point, and in April, 1890, declined an appointment tendered him by Governor Hill as member of the judicial constitutional commission.

Despite his active career, he was for twenty years Professor in the Law School at Cincinnati, for six years a trustee of the University of Cincinnati, and is to-day one of the trustees of Barnard College.

A Free Mason and Knight Templar (also 33° Scottish Rite), member of the Beta Theta Phi Fraternity (Western Reserve and Harvard Chapters), and of the Western Reserve and Dartmouth Chapters of the Phi Beta Kappa, Governor Hoadly is in New York a member of the Lawyers, Century, Democratic, Reform, Manhattan, Metropolitan, and 19th Century Clubs.

Hervey Seward Hoadly was born in the old homestead on State Street near Pine in New Haven, Conn. He was a carriage maker by trade and worked as an apprentice to his father until of age. At twenty-one he had only his trade and fifty cents to commence the world with. He worked at the bench a few years and then went into partnership with his brother George. It was not long before his ambitious, energetic nature asserted itself and he branched out into various enterprises. Everything he touched proved successful, and at forty-five he had amassed a large property and was a wealthy man. He established a large carriage business in his native town with branches and representatives in Augusta, Ga., and Mobile, Ala. He also owned a large amount of real estate, valuable business sites and the Pavilion hotel, a favorite Northern resort for Southerners before the war.

Mr. Hoadly confined himself strictly to business and never held any public office, but was always foremost in public enterprises and improvements. He was an ardent admirer of Henry Clay, after whom his eldest son was named. His active, progressive business career was suddenly terminated by his death in Philadelphia while on a business trip to the South.

"The announcement of the death of Hervey S. Hoadly yesterday was received with universal regret in this city, where he has been long known and respected. As one of the most prominent business men of this city, and interested in various manufacturing establishments and public improvements, his loss can be hardly replaced. His death occurred at about 12 o'clock yesterday morning in Philadelphia, where he was attacked on his way to the South.

Many young men commencing business have proved the generosity of Mr. Hoadly, and the whole community will mourn his loss." [New Haven Journal and Courier of Feb. 10, 1852.]

"The death of Mr. Hervey S. Hoadly of this city is one of those events which comes with almost stunning effect upon the business portion of our community, while it develops a sincere grief in every one. Mr. Hoadly was one of the most active mechanics in the city, who by application and industry has acquired a large competence; and at the time of his death was largely interested in various branches of business, giving employment to many of our people.

Mr. Hoadly was a man of the strictest integrity and enlarged sympathies for his fellow men, and his sudden death will be universally regretted." [New Haven Register of Feb. 10, 1852.]

best advantage. As a result he accumulated a large property. Mr. Hoadley, a year or two since, erected the magnificent iron building on the corner of Crown and Church streets, an ornament to the city and indicative of his great foresight. He was a man that took an active interest in all that pertained to the welfare of New Haven, and rejoiced in the prosperity of the city. He was a member of the city government in 1867 and 1868 and one of the board of road commissioners, his term expiring in June, 1870, having served three years. He was also a director in the Merchants National Bank. Mr. Hoadley was an unostentatious man, and of remarkably refined and modest feelings. He was for years an attendant of the Third Congregational Church. By his death the city has lost another of her honored citizens of advanced years."—(New Haven Palladium of Dec. 22, 1871.)

Milo Hoadley was graduated at the Cheshire (Conn.) Academy, quite an honor in those days, and passed the early years of his life mostly in Plymouth, where he was associated with his father in the clock business. He was also in the same business for a time in Marietta, Ohio, but returned home and followed his profession of civil engineering until he went to California in 1849. He later surveyed the Shepang Railroad in Connecticut. He came to California among the early pioneers in October, 1849, taking up a claim under the old Spanish grant, and made his home in San Francisco where he resided the remainder of his life. He at once entered upon the practice of his profession, that of a civil engineer. He came prominently before the public about the year 1854 in connection with a proposed system of sewerage the city, which was known at the time as "Hoadley's grade." Many people claim now that had Mr. Hoadley's ideas been carried out the trouble of late years in draining and sewerage the city south of Market Street would have been avoided. He followed surveying until the loss of an arm forced him to abandon his profession.

Mr. Hoadley was a member of the old Vigilance Committee and had been a member of the Society of Pioneers since its organization. He was a member of the Veteran Odd Fellows and of Templar Lodge, No. 17, of the Odd Fellows. His residence was at the corner of Bush and Lyon Streets, and there he celebrated his golden wedding April 27, 1881, when under an arch of flowers the venerable pair received the congratulations of their relatives and friends. The flowers were all taken from Mr. Hoadley's garden, grown in the open air. Mr. Hoadley saw seven generations of his family and at his death was the Head of the Hoadley Family, being the oldest son of the oldest son from William Hoadley the Settler.

Mr. Hoadley's death was the result of injuries he received by being thrown from his carriage while on his way to examine a mine at Sonora.

"Mrs. Sarah E. Hoadley, widow of the late Milo Hoadley, will always be remembered by her many friends and acquaintances for her many acts of charity and loving kindness covering a period of a great number of years' residence in this city. She was one of the originators of St. Paul's Episcopal Church of this city and gave its affairs active attention for many years, but of late her health and strength have confined her to her home. She was connected with many charitable institutions during the early years of this city, and it was just such energy and helping hands as hers that did much to give the institutions the hold they now have on the hearts of the public." [S. F. Chronicle of Aug. 25, 1890.]

George Thompson Hoadley spent the early part of his life in the house where he was born in Hoadleyville, now Grey-stone, in the town of Plymouth, Conn. At an early age he commenced driving a four-horse team to New Haven and Hartford two or three times a week, carrying clocks and returning with heavy loads of lumber. A few years after his marriage he moved to the Tomlinson farm one mile south of the Centre, where he lived for over forty years. In politics he was a democrat. Soon after the death of his wife he sold his farm and bought the place on South street where he died, his youngest daughter and her family living with him. Mr. Hoadley lived to see thirteen grandchildren and six great-grandchildren. It can be truly said that he was a thorough farmer, a good neighbor, and a generous, kind hearted friend; one ever ready in his days of prosperity to aid and assist in all public interests, and in later years, with less of means, giving of his sympathy, doing little deeds of kindness to those with whom he came in daily contact.

William Henry* Hoadley passed the early years of his life in his birth place and its vicinity. When the war broke out he was a student at Baldwin University, Berea, Ohio. Being a patriot and a loyalist by inheritance, he volunteered under the first call for troops and served about one year in an Ohio regiment. During that time he was taken sick and received a discharge for physical disability. He returned to Illinois, recuperated for a short time, and then reënlisted in the Seventy-fourth Illinois Infantry. He was at once elected first-lieutenant and served in that regiment for two years and nine months. While in that command he was promoted to captain and then to lieutenant-colonel. He was a brave, cool headed soldier and acquitted himself as a true patriot in every duty.

Mr. Hoadley entered the Methodist ministry in 1870, becoming a member of the Rock River conference. He continued his membership in that conference till his death. His first charge was at Franklinville, one year; Frankfort, two; Lisbon, one; Kankakee, three; Plattville, three; Peotone, one. In the latter part of October, 1882, he arrived in Huron with his family to take charge of the Huron church. He preached for it till the following spring when he resigned on account of ill health. He went to the country and remained on a farm for six months, where his health was benefited. The temperance movement began to take shape in South Dakota, and he was appointed Deputy Grand Worthy Chief Templar and Lecturer for Dakota by the Good Templars. He forthwith entered upon the work of organizing the temperance element into alliances and lodges, and in various ways crystallizing the opposition to intoxicating drinks.

In addition to these duties he formed a partnership with Mr. Asher F. Pay in September, 1884, to publish a temperance paper in Huron, known as the Dakota Alliance, of which Mr. Hoadley was the editor. The result of this work is seen in the fact that when the people voted on the adoption of the South Dakota Constitution, they incorporated a prohibition section therein. Mr. Hoadley deserves more credit for the successful result of this battle with the saloon than any man who participated in it. He traveled and lectured and wrote, by day and by night, for months and months to achieve this end. His memory should long remain green in the hearts of Dakotans as the Dakota leader in this great battle.

This work ended, he accepted the pastorate of the Altoona M. E. church in the fall of 1885. But his health was so impaired that he was compelled to relinquish preaching the following July. He returned to Huron, and from that date till his decease he was not able to do any manual labor. In September he made a short visit to Illinois to meet his brethren of the Rock River conference, but returned weaker than when he departed, and died of bronchitis and throat troubles in November. For twenty years he battled with disease, and "did not see a well day in all that time." Just a week prior to his death, by his request, the Grand Army Post of Huron, to which he belonged, and the Woman's Relief Corps held a social at his residence. During the evening the Corps presented him a beautiful gold headed ebony cane. In response to the presentation speech Mr. Hoadley said: "As to the hereafter, that's all settled; there is no fear of that."

He was a man of power and influence, wherever his lot was cast. In the church he was an indomitable worker, and was greatly blessed in all his pastorates. He was faithful in every walk of life; an honor to every community; a noble, brave, true-hearted Christian man.

married in May 1863, ALICE HOWLAND WESSON, daughter of David and Alice (Howland) Wesson, born 1844 in Brooklyn, N. Y.; resides in New York City.

Russell Hotchkiss Hoadley at the age of twelve years was sent to boarding school, where he remained until he was eighteen. He was preparing to enter Stevens Institute, the best scientific school at that time, and had passed his entrance examinations, but his health giving way, he was compelled to give up his intention of entering the Institute, and in 1853 was sent abroad. He traveled extensively in England and the Continent for two years, when he returned home, perfectly restored in health. Within a few years he made a second visit abroad, and visited the Holy Land, Greece, and the East. Shortly after his return home he joined the Seventh Regiment, in which he served his full time of seven years. He was promoted to the rank of major and was on General Spicer's staff during the New York riots. In 1859 Mr. Hoadley went into business for himself and with his father's aid made many valuable business relations in South America. The next year he went into partnership with a Mr. Handy under the firm name of Handy and Hoadley, which continued till 1865, when Mr. Handy retired and a new firm was formed under the name of Hoadley, Eno & Company. This was dissolved in 1869 and the present firm of Hoadley and Company was formed, doing a banking and general commission business in New York City, with branches in New Orleans and Greytown, Nicaragua.

During Mr. Hoadley's business career his name was a guarantee for sound business principles, justice, and integrity, as his father's was before him, in whatever connection it was used. He was connected with many business institutions, being a director of The Hanover Fire Insurance Company, The Atlantic Mutual Insurance Company, and others. Although Mr. Hoadley was a member of New York's oldest and best known clubs, being one of the first members of the Union and Union League clubs, he seldom made use of them, preferring his home life. At the time of Mr. Hoadley's death, and while he resided in New York, fourteen years, he was a member of St. Thomas' Church.

Tappen Hoadley when about fourteen years of age was sent by his father as a passenger in one of his own sailing vessels to Brussels, returning in the same ship. After he had left school and when nineteen years of age the memories of his enjoyment of the voyage awakened in him a strong desire for a sea life. Himself always a great lover of the sea, his father consented to his son making a thorough trial of a seaman's life, and fitted him out for a voyage to China in one of Mr. A. A. Low's ships. On his return from his voyage Tappen had by no means abandoned the idea of following the sea as a profession. He was soon afterwards made an officer of a ship on the Pacific, and was serving with credit and in the line of promotion, when he was stricken down with a tropical fever which shattered and permanently weakened his constitution. He was thus compelled to abandon his chosen pursuit, but never lost his early fondness for the sea. He afterwards engaged in the wholesale dry goods business which he followed until about a year before his death.

Though Mr. Hoadley was a comparatively young man, his genial nature and integrity of character had become conspicuous, and he had formed outside of his own family many strong attachments. On a wider experience than falls to the lot of most youths and in a varied intercourse with the world, he maintained a purity of life and character and a fidelity to early home influence throughout which made him respected and loved in all the relations of life.

219. REV. JAMES HART HOADLEY, D.D. (Lyman<sup>122</sup>, Philemon<sup>58</sup>, Jacob<sup>27</sup>, Samuel<sup>8</sup>, Samuel<sup>3</sup>, William<sup>1</sup>), born 28 February 1847 in Collinsville, N. Y.; resides in New York City; married 21 October 1875 in Honesdale, Penn., Mrs. SARAH ELIZA (SCOTT) SNYDER, widow of Rev. George N. Snyder, and daughter of Charles Mason and Sarah Gates (Burrows) Scott, born 28 March 1847 in Binghamton, N. Y.

James Hart Hoadley spent his childhood and youth in the quiet village of his birth, where he attended the district school. His father, Lyman Hoadley, died in 1861, and the following year his mother with her two sons removed to Rome, N. Y. Here he attended the public school for a year or two, when he entered Rome Academy, where he was prepared for college. In 1866 he entered the Freshman class of Hamilton College at Clinton, N. Y., at which he was graduated four years later. While in college he took several prizes for excellence in composition and oratory, among which was the Clark Prize in his Senior year. It was during his Sophomore year that he became a Christian and he united with the College Church March 15, 1868. Up to this time the thought of becoming a minister had never entered his mind, but having consecrated himself to Christ, he at once began to ask the important question "Lord, what wilt Thou have me to do?" After careful and prayerful consideration he felt it to be his duty to enter the Christian Ministry, believing fully that Christ called him to that high and holy office.

Mr. Hoadley was graduated with honors in 1870, winning a Key of the Phi Beta Kappa Society. In the fall of the same year he entered Union Theological Seminary in the City of New York, at which he was graduated in 1873. During his seminary course he was actively engaged in Mission work. After graduation he became the pastor of Faith Chapel in West Forty-sixth Street, which was at that time a mission connected with the West Presbyterian Church. On May 3, 1873, he was ordained by the Presbytery of New York as an Evangelist in Faith Chapel, and on the 9th of November of the same year he began his ministry. His work was greatly prospered, and at the end of ten years the Mission Chapel had grown into a self-sustaining and independent church; and on December 17, 1883, he was installed pastor of Faith Presbyterian Church, where he has continued to labor ever since.

During the entire twenty years of Mr. Hoadley's ministry his work has been greatly blessed. One thousand two hundred and thirty persons have been received into Church fellowship, an average of sixty-one each year. Of this number eight hundred and twenty-three, or about two-thirds of the whole, united on confession of their faith; the other third joining from other churches. The Sunday School of Faith Church enrolls more than seven hundred children.

The degree of Doctor in Divinity was conferred upon Mr. Hoadley by Hamilton College in June, 1891.

“Mr. John Chipman Hoadley, whose death occurred at the Hotel Warren, Boston Highlands, yesterday, was a man of rare character and great ability. He was the son and grandson of farmers, and passed his youth in Utica. At the age of 18 he was employed in preliminary surveys for the enlargement of the Erie canal, and his ability as a draughtsman brought him quick promotion and more responsible work. In 1844 he went to assist Horatio N. and Erastus B. Bigelow in the foundation and development of the manufactories and town of Lancaster, now Clinton. Four years later he, with Gordon McKay, formed a partnership for the manufacture of engines and other machinery in Pittsfield. In 1852 he was called to the position of superintendent of the Lawrence machine shop, and soon after reluctantly accepted the position of agent, well knowing the failure of the company was only a question of time. After closing the affairs of that company, he went into the manufacture of portable engines, then but little used in this country. Their skilful design and honest construction soon gained a name and large market all over the country. He was granted several patents. After a number of prosperous years, the crisis of 1873, with its shrinkage of value and bad debts, forced the company to close up its affairs. During a part of this time Mr. Hoadley was also interested in the organization of the Clinton Wire Cloth Company, agent of the New Bedford Copper Company, and of the McKay Sewing Machine Association, and was one of the founders and the President of the Archibald Wheel Company. Since 1876 he had been engaged in various interests, especially as an expert in mechanical and engineering questions, serving in important cases in the courts and in responsible positions in the mechanical exhibitions. The Massachusetts Institute of Technology, of which he was one of the original trustees, claimed for many years a part of his interests, and as a member of the State Board of Health during more than seven years he did his part in its most useful work; beside filling other public offices, as alderman in Lawrence, as member of the Legislature in 1858, and as a presidential elector in 1872. Commissioned by the State of Massachusetts during the rebellion, Capt. Hoadley visited England to inspect ordnance for harbor defence. An ardent Republican, he was early an earnest and uncompromising abolitionist.

This brief summary comprises, however, only a fraction of Mr. Hoadley's real interests. The unique feature of his life was his intense enthusiasm in many paths of literature and in the higher lines of thought. If mechanics was his pleasure, literature was his delight. No pressure of business could draw him wholly away from his books. At the age of 19, supporting a mother and six sisters, in the following years earning a reputation and a fortune, he kept out of the rut of the mere business man, studied French, German, Latin and Greek, and was as familiar with Homer's Odyssey and its translations as with the design of his engine. Collecting about him a rich and choice library, reading in curious and out-of-the-way lines, as well as in the English classics. Of marvellous memory, he became a centre around whom a group of inquirers would easily gather, and from whom they could always draw facts most correctly stated and poetry most musically spoken. But beyond the intelligence and learning of the man, it was the character of Mr. Hoadley that impressed all with whom he came in contact. He was more than honest, there was a touch of ancient chivalry in his sense of honor. He trusted men, and he expected, and always acted as if he expected, the same honorable sense in others that was found in him; and, though at times sadly disappointed and cruelly treated, he never lost his confidence in man. Generous to a fault in success, it was in defeat and disappointment that his character, his patience, magnanimity, perseverance and never failing courtesy shone most clearly.

A characteristic illustration of Mr. Hoadley's keen sense of honor and promptness of action was shown at a critical time early in the war of the rebellion. Ascertaining from his old friend, Gen. Oliver, that it was proposed to pay the interest on the public debt of Massachusetts in paper rather than in gold, he hastened to consult the late George Baty Blake, who urged him to see Gov. Andrew, in order that, if possible, the danger might be averted. On his attention being called to the question, Gov. Andrew by a timely statement in his message saved the credit of Massachusetts untarnished.

Many civil and mechanical engineers throughout the country owe to Mr. Hoadley their early enthusiasm, their first free lessons in drawing, and their present positions. Back of all else was the deep religious faith which supported his principles, and was revealed in every word and deed. He was a devout member of the Episcopal Church, and for many years warden of Grace Church, Lawrence.

Mr. Hoadley was 67 years and 10 months old. He leaves a widow, two daughters and a son. Funeral services will take place at St. James Church, Roxbury, at 2.30 p. m. to-morrow, and the remains will be taken to Albany for interment."

221. HORACE PHILEMON HOADLEY (Philemon<sup>125</sup>, Philemon<sup>58</sup>, Jacob<sup>27</sup>, Samuel<sup>2</sup>, Samuel<sup>3</sup>, William<sup>1</sup>), born 17 July 1833 in Martinsburgh, N. Y.; died 20 October 1893 in New Haven, Conn.; married, 1st, 10 April 1855 in Cape May, N. J., AMELIA ORPHA HUBBARD, daughter of Edwin and Hannah (North) Hubbard, born 8 September 1836 in Berlin, Conn.; died 2 October 1861 in New Haven. He married, 2d, 27 August 1873 in Rutherford, N. J., Mrs. JEANIE (IVISON) CAMPFIELD, widow of Rev. Nathan Perkins Campfield of Newark, N. J., and daughter of Henry and Sarah Bogart (Brinkerhoff) Ivison of New York City.

Horace Philemon Hoadley before two years of age came with his parents to New Haven, and with the exception of one year passed in Meriden and one year before the Civil War spent in Texas he passed here the remainder of his days, esteemed and respected in social and business life alike. He was one of the original pupils of the Lancasterian school under the instruction of the late Mr. Lovell, and later became a pupil in General Russell's military school. These teachers left deep impressions on his mind, and into his life entered many traits developed under their counsel and inspiring leadings. He attained to the rank of captain or training master on the school field, and in after years when his Country was in need and peril, his military spirit led him to again bring into use his early training, and it was under Major Hoadley the First Connecticut Cavalry was trained, equipped, and sent to do such grand service for the cause of Union and Freedom for all.

Always an attendant at the North, now United Church, a Sabbath School boy there, he made a profession of his faith and enrolled his name among the people of his God in September, 1849. He was a teacher for years in the Sabbath School and its superintendant, and next to his home no place was so dear as his church. He always occupied the same pew, and his last commemoration of the Lord's Supper was partaken of on the Sabbath of the same month he took his first communion forty-four years before. He was identified with the Y. M. C. A. from its very beginning in his city and State.

Mr. Hoadley's business life commenced as express messenger for Adams Express Company between New Haven and New York, in the days when their large sums of money had to be carried on the person of the messenger intrusted. He left the company to go into the carriage business in Texas, to which the Civil War put an end. His thrilling experience getting away from Texas and the perils of the whole journey North space cannot be given here to rehearse. He was for a while interested in insurance, but the past twenty-two or three years he was actively and successfully engaged in real estate, having built up for himself the largest business of that kind in the city. He also held the office of Secretary in the Plant Investment Company.

Of a most genial, loving nature, none knew Mr. Hoadley but to value his friendship. One testimony comes from all who knew or ever met him, "A true Christian gentleman." The best portion of his life was that given in the home. There the gentle sweetness of voice and manner had full play; there the loving, devoted husband, there the tender, affectionate, companionable father lived; and as he often said, "If the new heavens and the new earth are to be our home hereafter, this house is where I wish to be."

J. I. H.

Extract from the annual sermon by his pastor, Rev. Dr. T. T. Munger, Jan. 21, 1894.

"I will name but one other on the list of our dead,—Mr. Horace P. Hoadley. He was of a profoundly religious nature, and a busy life did not repress or prevent it. I think the Christian was always in the foreground, guiding him and shaping his life down to its last detail. He was to an uncommon degree actuated by the law of kindness; he loved to minister and to serve; he was by nature amiable and full of kindly consideration of others, and, receiving life as a blessing, he gave it out to others as such, passing out of life recounting his mercies, and without complaint. A pastor might often mistake if he should discriminate between his parishioners as to their worth, but he cannot see a strong, good man taken away, his place in the church and in the city vacant, without an unusual sense of loss, and he repeats the words of old: 'Help, Lord; for the godly man ceaseth.'"

Robert Bruce Hoadley went to California at the age of eighteen in 1854, and was at Vancouver Island and the Frazer River. He returned home in 1859 and went into mercantile business at Pitcher, N. Y. He sold out in 1861 and went to Iowa. There he enlisted as a private August 14, 1862, in Company C, Twenty-sixth Iowa Volunteers, being appointed fourth corporal two months later. After the battle of Arkansas Post January 11, 1863, where they lost twenty-two out of the forty men that went into the engagement, he was detailed as orderly-sergeant and received his commission as first-sergeant May 1, 1863, when he was before Vicksburg, where he was slightly wounded in the head in a charge on the Rebel works. He helped take Atlanta, and had command of the company on Sherman's march to the sea from Atlanta to Savannah, where he expected a lieutenant's commission, but owing to his refusing to carry a sword and put aside his gun, he did not receive it. He was with Sherman through the Carolinas and at the capture of Columbia, S. C. After the surrender of Lee and Johnston he marched to Washington for the Grand Review, where he was offered a lieutenant's commission, but refused it. He was discharged from the service June 6, 1865.

After the war Mr. Hoadley was engaged in mercantile business at Camanche, Iowa, for thirteen years, and was elected Mayor of Camanche in 1878. In 1879 he went to Colorado, where he was engaged in silver mining eight seasons, in the meantime moving his family to Binghamton, N. Y. He owns the old homestead of 160 acres, and resides on a seven acre farm in that city.

George Edward Hoadley entered Yale College with the Class of 1864, but left to take charge of the New York branch of his father's carriage business. His means rose year by year until his property was inventoried at hundreds of thousands. When he was worth $700,000, he told a friend that he would only be satisfied when his belongings reached a million; but that time never came, for on Black Friday, early in the 'Seventies, the fluctuations in Wall Street swept away nearly all his estate. This great reverse seemed to discourage Mr. Hoadley, and soon after, when the New York business was given up, he returned to New Haven. He was averse to entering into active business again, and from that time was occupied with the management of his father's estate, the Hoadley Building being set off to him when the estate was divided, to which he added improvements.

Mr. Hoadley possessed a fine physique and carriage. He thought and acted quickly, had good business capacity, possessed generous impulses, was kind, liberal, and noted for his strong friendships. In the way of social gifts he had few equals. A wide course of reading had stored his mind with knowledge, and a tenacious memory helped him to use it at a fitting time and in a fitting manner. He was not only entertaining, but instructively entertaining, and it would be hard to find one more apt in quoting the brightest sayings of both ancient and modern authors.

At the time of his marriage he purchased the brick house on Fountain Street in Westville, a suburb of New Haven, known as the Beecher place. He died suddenly with only slight warning from apoplexy.

They had no children.

A joint stock company, of which he was a member, had started in New York to open a business of supplying the Eastern and Southern markets with California wines and liquors. This company started in March, 1865, and Mr. Hoadley was selected to travel South as their representative. When he started he did not expect to be gone over two months, but while traveling he met parties that had large interests in some mines in Mexico. These gentlemen, hearing that Mr. Hoadley was quite a mining expert, offered him a large sum of money to go to these mines and give them his opinion of their value. He accepted the offer, and thought he could benefit the interests of his own business at the same time. After reaching the City of Mexico he had to travel five hundred miles into the interior. His family heard from him after he reached the mines, but on his return he was followed by Indians or Mexicans and murdered for his money. There were three other gentlemen with him, and the party started to travel on horseback. They were warned not to do so, as it was considered very dangerous to travel that way in those times as the Indians and Mexicans were at war. It was in December, 1865, or January, 1866, that he met his death, but it was four years before his family knew his fate. Mr. Hoadley was a man that knew no fear and consequently did not realize the danger he was exposing himself to.

For the next two years was in the wood turning business, and in November, 1888, had the misfortune to have his mill burnt and lost all his property. In May of the following year he obtained of his uncle, Mr. H. B. Plant, the position of purser on the steamship Olivette, one of the finest of the ships of the Plant system, running from Boston to Bar Harbor, Me., in the summer, and from Port Tampa, Fla., to Havana, Cuba, in the winter. Hoadley (315), born 7 February 1853 in Lansingburgh, N. Y.

Horace George Hoadley received his early education in private and public schools and the Hillhouse High School in his native city. He then entered Hopkins Grammar School, where he studied four years, and at which he was graduated in 1879, entering Yale College the next fall. He pursued the four years Academic course and was graduated with the Class of 1883. His intention had long been to study law, though he had had some thought of the ministry. In the final choice he was governed by the opinion expressed by his lamented classmate Prof. E. Tompkins McLaughlin in a talk with E. H. Moore the class valedictorian, with whom Mr. Hoadley was well acquainted. Having spent two or three summer vacations in charge of a concreting business in which his father was interested in New Haven, Mr. Hoadley now went to Bennington, Vt., where for eight months he assisted his brother in his lumber business, not, however, giving up his intention of studying for the ministry. It was here that Mr. Hoadley had previously met his brother's wife's sister who afterward became his wife.

In the fall of 1884 Mr. Hoadley entered the Yale Divinity School, and took the three years' course, being graduated in 1887. He began his ministry at once in charge of the Congregational Church in East Canaan, Litchfield Co., Conn., being ordained its pastor April 3d of the following year. He had married the previous September. He was especially interested in developing that method of church work known as the Home Department of the Sunday School, because it enabled him to organize systematic and continuous visitation on the part of some of the lay members of the church. Being interested in the kindred work of the Evangelical Alliance and desiring to devote all his time to it, he left East Canaan in the fall of 1890, after a stay of about three years and a half, in order to take up a short course of study in social science at Johns Hopkins University.

In April of the following year Mr. Hoadley had an opportunity to come to Waterbury, Conn., to take charge of a newly organized coöperative effort on the part of the Protestant churches of that city. The organization is called The Directors of Christian Visitation and Charity. From May 1, 1891, to December 1, 1893, he spent his time as superintendent of this organization, in visiting the poor and strangers and persons not connected with the churches, but especially in leading members of the churches to do this work of friendly visitation, assigning to them particular families for continuous attention. The hard times of the present winter have diverted his efforts to the dispensing of a relief fund under the direction of a general citizens' committee.

JOHN HOADLY

OF GUILFORD, CONN.

[Contributed by Charles J. Hoadly, LL.D., of Hartford, Conn.]

JOHN HOADLY was born in England January, 1616–1617. “When the troubles of his country forced his family to New England, (April 26, 1639,)” he was a passenger in the same ship with William Leete (afterwards governor) and others of the first settlers of Guilford, Connecticut, and with twenty-five others signed what was called the Plantation Covenant, on ship-board, June 1st, 1639. His home-lot in Guilford was on the south side of Broad Street, between those of Edward Benton and Jacob Sheaffe. He was one of the seven pillars of the first church gathered in the town May 19, 1643. In 1653, he returned to Great Britain and was appointed Chaplain to the Garrison of Edinburgh Castle. His family followed him two years later. When Gen. Monk made his excursion from Scotland, by which the Restoration of King Charles II. was brought about, he borrowed of John Hoadly £300, which was never repaid. In a pamphlet by Robert Hoadly Ashe, D.D., published London, 1799, it is said that in the Herald’s College is an original letter from Charles II. to this John Hoadly, “expressive of his gratitude for his service in effecting his restoration: and, in token of his royal favour, his Majesty was graciously pleased to desire, that all persons hereafter bearing or using the arms of Hoadly would attach, as a crest to the said arms, a dove with an olive branch in its mouth, as a perpetual emblem of his restoration." After the restoration John Hoadly settled with his family in Rolvenden, Kent, 1662, where he died June 28th, 1668, and was buried July 1st, according to the Rolvenden parish register.

He married at Guilford, July 14, 1642, Sarah Bushnell, bapt. Nov. 26, 1625, at Horsted, Sussex, died at Halsted, Kent, Nov. 1, 1693. They had twelve children, but their posterity in the male line became extinct in 1776, on the death of John Hoadly, LL.D., chancellor of the diocese of Winchester, from an article by whom prefixed to the works of his father, Bishop Benjamin Hoadly, part of the foregoing information has been derived. The seven children born in Guilford were :

- i. SAMUEL, b. 30 Sept. 1643, went to Edinburgh 1655, where he had his school education, and in 1659 went to King James's college there. He was a school-master all his days, beginning at Cranebrook, Kent, in 1662-3, and at his death, April 17, 1705, was master of the public school at Norwich and is buried in St. Luke's chapel in the cathedral there. He took orders in the church of England. He published two or three schoolbooks, one of which went through eleven editions by 1773. He is the first native of Connecticut who wrote and published a book. He was father of Benjamin, successively Bishop of Bangor, Hereford, Salisbury and Winchester, b. 1676, d. 1761, and of John, successively Bishop of Leighlin and Fernes, Archbishop of Dublin, Archbishop of Armagh, b. 1678, d. 1746. When Benjamin was nominated by the King to the bishoprick of Bangor, 1715, he applied to the earl marshal for a grant of a coat-of-arms to be borne by himself and other descendants of his grandfather. The original patent is now in the possession of Charles J. Hoadly, of Hartford, Conn., who has kindly furnished the cut of the arms.
- ii. JOHN, b. 3 Jan.; d. 14 Mar. 1645.
- iii. JOHN, b. 3 June 1647; d. an infant.
- iv. ATHIA, b. 7 June 1648; d. at Rolvenden 27 Mar. 1664. The Rolvenden records give the name as Alicia.
- v. JOHN, b. 8 Apr. 1650, who became rector of Halsted, Kent, and vicar of Nockholt.
- vi. NATHANIEL, b. 7 June 1652; d. in Edinburgh Castle 16 Feb. 1657.
- vii. STEPHEN, b. 17 May [24 May Guilford record.] 1654; d. at Guilford at three weeks old.

THOMAS HOADLEY

OF HARTLAND, VT., AND HIS DESCENDANTS.

1. THOMAS HOADLEY was born in England in 1737. Nothing has been learned of his origin except that there seems to be a pretty general belief among his descendants that he was related to the family to which Bishop Hoadly belonged. He came to America with an only brother JOHN HOADLEY and settled near Boston, Mass. JOHN was unmarried and was drowned about the time of the Revolution. THOMAS married about 1760 MARY STONE, whose origin is unknown. Their children were born it is said "near Boston," but descendants of their fifth child say he was born in Tewksbury. Thomas Hoadley paid a tax in Brookline in 1771 and 1775. He served in the Massachusetts Line in the Revolution and drew a pension from April 20, 1818. After the war he removed with his family to Hartland, Vermont, where he bought a farm on which he lived the remainder of his life. His wife Mary died there 13 June 1818, aged 80 years. He died there 20 June 1829.*

Y.; resides in Hampton, Iowa; married 11 January 1890 in Toledo, Iowa, MARY ELIZABETH GARDNER, daughter of George Preston and Sarah (Jackson) Gardner, born 28 October 1869 in Tama Co., Iowa.

Philo Elvin Hoadley went to work for himself the summer of 1879 on the farm of Egbert Weed (since his brother-in-law), in Linn County, Iowa, and for the next two summers continued farming in that neighborhood, attending the country school in the winter. By being frugal he had saved about $250 of his hard-earned wages, and with this started for college in company with his brother Frederick, who was soon taken sick and compelled to give up school work. The college was just opening up its first year's work at Toledo [Ia.] and some of the instructors were young and not well qualified to stir up enthusiasm in the minds of country boys. The result was that he became discouraged and gave up the work before the term closed and returned home. In March, 1882, he went to Valparaiso, Indiana, where he spent the year in studying at the Northern Indiana Normal School. He returned in the spring of 1883 to care for his brother Frederick, who had never recovered from his first illness which was undoubtedly brought on by a sunstroke a few years previous and greatly aggravated by his studies. After his brother's death in June of that year until the spring of 1890 he was employed in studying, teaching country schools, and in working on the farm. In August, 1890, he was elected principal of the schools at Sabula, Iowa, and was twice reelected to the same position, each time at an increased salary, and was again offered the school at another good increase, but declined to accept. On May 9, 1893, he was unanimously elected superintendent of schools at Hampton, Iowa, and accepted the position. That he made a success of his work while in Sabula is proved by the flattering testimonials he has received from his fellow townsmen and others. As one of his former teachers has written, "he is a fine organizer, good in government, and especially apt in imparting instruction."
